

Hydrogen gas from tanks and oxygen in air provide a continuous supply of fuel for the fuel cell. The electrolyte is a solid polymer that allows hydrogen ions to pass through.