

Neurons are bundled together into nerves in the peripheral nervous system and into tracts in the central nervous system. Nerves are macroscopic structures. Neurons, however, are microscopic structures. Even a neuron that is over 1 m long cannot be seen with the unaided eye.