

(A) Papillae on the tongue contain taste buds that are sensitive to salty, sweet, sour, and bitter molecules. (B) Electron micrograph of many papillae. (C) Electron micrograph of one papilla. (D) Taste cells within the taste buds. The taste buds depolarize in response to particular tastes and generate an action potential that sends a neural impulse to the brain.