

Plants produce structural and metabolic substances for their own use. Humans have developed numerous technologies to take advantage of the properties of these plant substances.