

CHAPTER 7	Respiratory Disorders Quiz	BLM 7.3.2
ASSESSMENT

Match the respiratory disorder with the correct description. Terms may be used more than once.

Answer Choices

- | | | |
|----------------|----------------|--------------------|
| A. Tonsillitis | D. Lung Cancer | G. Emphysema |
| B. Pneumonia | E. Laryngitis | H. Asthma |
| C. Bronchitis | F. Pleurisy | I. Cystic Fibrosis |

1. These are classified as upper respiratory tract infections. _____ , _____
2. Patients with this disorder usually have symptoms of sore throat and hoarseness. _____
3. To prevent this infection, children often have had surgery to remove the possibly offending structure—it is no longer a common procedure. _____
4. Treatments for this disorder include inhalers to spray healthy versions of the abnormal gene into the lungs. _____
5. Young patients with this disorder often have to use a nebulizer to administer their medicine as they are unable to use an inhaler properly. _____
6. This is a genetic condition that causes the lungs to become coated with very thick and sticky mucous. _____
7. What three disorders are caused primarily by cigarette smoking? _____, _____ and _____
8. This disorder is characterized by the uncontrollable and invasive growth of abnormal cells in the lungs. _____
9. This disorder is characterized by the swelling and irritation of the membranes that surround the lungs. _____
10. Almost all cases of this disorder are caused by smoking and those who develop it often need to use low-flow oxygen tanks. _____
11. People with AIDS suffer from a rare bacterial form of this disorder. _____
12. This disorder is an obstructive disorder that causes the walls of the alveoli to break down and lose their elasticity. _____
13. This is a disease that has two main types: lobular and bronchial, and it is typically caused by bacteria and viruses. _____
14. This disorder has carcinomas form caused by various carcinogens. _____
15. Patients with this disorder have constant inflammation in their airways and are extremely sensitive to triggers such as smoke and dust. _____