

Structure of the Male Reproductive System Answer Key

Structures of the male reproductive system. Sperm originate in the testes and leave the male body through the penis. The testes and the penis are located outside the body, while most of the other sexual structures are located inside the body.